

TRIS Considered a Success

The Department of Criminal Justice Training's (DOCJT) online gateway to personnel and training management, officially known as the Training and Registration Information System (TRIS), was opened on Monday, October 28, 2013, for 2014 scheduling. Since its official launch in May 2013, TRIS has received rave reviews in how it takes the work out of managing annual training requirements. TRIS is, according to its users, a tremendous success.

The numbers speak for themselves -- on the first day of 2014 scheduling TRIS received over 1,700 requests for training and in just four days received over 5,000 requests. What's even more exciting is that TRIS has eliminated the need for the submission of paper applications and has saved hours of filling out, faxing, and processing hundreds of 29-1's.

Requested and sought after by chiefs and sheriffs all across the Commonwealth, TRIS was developed internally and tested by security professionals to ensure the confidentiality of personnel information while also allowing agency heads and training directors to efficiently and effectively coordinate training schedules.

"TRIS has greatly streamlined the registration process by allowing us to process massive amounts of training requests in a fraction of the time required to manually input them as we did in the past," said Ande Godsey, DOCJT Information Systems Manager. "We worked months to develop a system that is overwhelmingly meeting the needs of the law enforcement community," he explained. "If you're not presently a registered TRIS user, we strongly encourage you to sign up today," he added.

Agency access to TRIS requires at least one registered user to complete TRIS Training. The link below is to a Webinar that you must review to satisfy that training requirement. Following that review, submit the User Application Form (found at <https://docjt.ky.gov/tris/login.asp>) as well as send an e-mail to DOCJT.TRIS@ky.gov advising that you have completed the Webinar. In your email, please provide the agency name, the name and title of the user, and the completion date of the Webinar. Once validated, the user will receive an email with a username and password to access TRIS.

It is important to note that while multiple users can access TRIS, only one registered user is required to complete the training for each agency.

Should you have any questions, please send an email to DOCJT.TRIS@ky.gov.
